Can Dirt Save the Earth?

Agriculture could pull carbon out of the air and into the soil — but it would mean a whole new way of thinking about how to tend the land.

YES!

“If compost were applied to a 25% of CA’s rangeland, the soil could absorb 75% of California’s yearly Greenhouse Gas emissions”

Roughly 40 million acres—40% of California's land—are used for agriculture

Includes 32 million acres of rangeland

Theory of Change

A few cents per purchase

Adds up to big investments in soil and more acres of regenerative farming.

This improves our food and restores our climate.

Impact & Storytelling

A lot goes into making the perfect cup of coffee.

Linea sources, roasts and serves the world's finest coffees. When they make a cappuccino, they reach for milk from Straus Family Creamery, and then they add an extra shot of climate action. 1% of each sale benefits farmers working to restore our climate—including Tresch Family Dairy, a part of the Straus network.

World

Linea's customers contribute to climate action through their purchases.

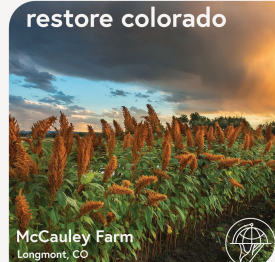

Farmers in the Straus network got a grant to sequester carbon and build healthy soil.

At Bernal Cutlery we're all about the food and the atmosphere.

That's why we add $1 to each transaction to draw down carbon with Zero Foodprint.

The money funds regenerative farming practices, which transform bad atmospheric carbon into good soil carbon—one of the most effective solutions to the climate crisis. Just let us know if you'd prefer to opt out.
